Category:Business software companies Category:Fire protection Lotus Emerges as Focus for 2017. After a solid season, Lotus is fully under their control once again and are focusing on making sure they are ready for 2017 and beyond. With the largest driver line-up in the team's history, Lotus have been quick to shape up. But with less than two weeks to go until testing, Lotus has emerged as the team to beat. The gradual shift to Team Principal Eric Boullier seeing the team through has allowed Lotus to strengthen their balance sheet and kit has been able to join the already strong driver line up. Even more than a year out, the team's drivers lineup is a key factor to the team's performance. They have a strong list of drivers with familiar faces in Jolyon Palmer, Esteban Ocon, Fernando Alonso and Daniil Kvyat, along with the promise of returning McLaren star Kevin Magnussen. First sign of progress came during the Canadian Grand Prix. Pre-season testing was no walk in the park, but by qualifying and the race, the team looked as strong as ever. A result that would have been all but impossible in Melbourne, a long way behind, but the potential of a win is tangible. Lotus are changing their line-up. Although it's not quite the same as when Adrian Newey was working on the RB7 in the early '00s, the rest of the team is now under their control, the car has become strong and there's an honest belief the team can be world beating. Looking ahead to next season, the question that remains is just how strong Lotus can be. In comparison to Ferrari, Red Bull and Mercedes, the team will have only two years to raise their game, and in a weak era at Ferrari, that will be an incredibly tough task. Finishing second was a remarkable achievement for Lotus and, aside from McLaren's uncompetitive season, they were the only team to finish in the Top 3. With F1 now based in cities with some of the best weather in the world, F1 is no longer about raw speed and the traditional seasons. Lotus is making a big move that will be hard to match if they want to develop and retain their audience.
